2-Day Walking Itinerary

Day 1 – Estuary paths and mountain views

Ease into the landscape with one of the region’s most rewarding lower-level walks.

10:00am | The Mawddach Trail

Following the old railway line between Dolgellau and Barmouth, the Mawddach Trail is one of the most scenic walking routes in Wales. The path follows the estuary through woodland, open water and wide mountain scenery, with changing views at every turn. The route is gentle and accessible, making it perfect for a relaxed first day in Eryri.

2:30pm | The Precipice Walk

For something slightly more elevated, head up to the famous Precipice Walk just above Dolgellau. Despite its dramatic name, the route is a relatively gentle circular walk, rewarding walkers with sweeping panoramic views across Cadair Idris, the Mawddach Estuary and the surrounding mountains.

Return to Penmaenuchaf in the evening for dinner in Afon Restaurant and a relaxed evening overlooking the hills beyond.

Day 2 – Cadair Idris

Today offers the chance to experience one of Wales' most iconic mountains.

9:00am | Climbing Cadair Idris

Rising majestically behind Penmaenuchaf, Cadair Idris is one of the defining peaks of southern Eryri. A variety of routes allow walkers to tailor the experience to their ability, from more gradual ascents to rewarding summit hikes with dramatic views stretching across mountains, lakes and coastline.

Along the way, the landscape constantly shifts, from rocky paths and mountain lakes to wide open ridges and panoramic viewpoints. For those wanting a gentler alternative, lower valley and lakeside walks can also be arranged with one of our experienced local guides.

3:00pm | Wild swimming in Eryri

After your walk, cool off with a wild swimming experience in one of Eryri's mountain lakes. Surrounded by dramatic scenery and fresh mountain air, it's a memorable way to experience the landscape from a completely different perspective.

Return to Penmaenuchaf in the afternoon or early evening to rest and recover after a memorable day in the mountains.

If you want to extend this into a 3-day walking tour, why not visit Yr Wyddfa (Mount Snowdon)

Day 3 – Yr Wyddfa (Mount Snowdon)

9:00am | Northern Eryri

Travel further north into the national park for a full day exploring the landscapes around Yr Wyddfa (Mount Snowdon), Wales' highest peak. For experienced walkers, a summit route offers an unforgettable day in the mountains, while gentler routes around the surrounding lakes and valleys provide equally spectacular scenery for those seeking a more relaxed pace. There's also the option to combine your walk with the famous mountain railway, allowing you to complete part of the journey by train. For many guests, this offers the perfect balance, taking in the experience of walking on Yr Wyddfa while enjoying a more relaxed descent after a day in the mountains. The journey itself reveals another side of Eryri, with dramatic mountain passes, lakes and wide open landscapes unfolding along the way. Return to Penmaenuchaf for your final evening in the mountains before departure the following morning.
